A Dynasty Born on the Iron Range

The North Stars' roots can be traced back to the rugged Iron Range of Minnesota, where hockey reigned supreme. With the establishment of the United States Hockey League (USHL) in 1946, the Hibbing Miners emerged as a powerhouse, capturing numerous championships. As the USHL gained prominence, the Miners' success laid the groundwork for the eventual birth of the North Stars.

From Duluth to Bloomington: A City's Embrace

In 1967, the North Stars joined the National Hockey League (NHL) and set up their home in Duluth. The city wholeheartedly embraced the team, creating a fervent fan base known for their unwavering support. However, in 1993, the franchise relocated to Bloomington, where it found a new home at the state-of-the-art Target Center.

Star-Studded Lineup, Unforgettable Moments

Throughout their history, the North Stars boasted an impressive roster of talented players who etched their names in hockey lore. Bobby Hull, Neal Broten, and Bill Goldsworthy are just a few of the legends who graced the ice with their exceptional skills and left an enduring legacy.

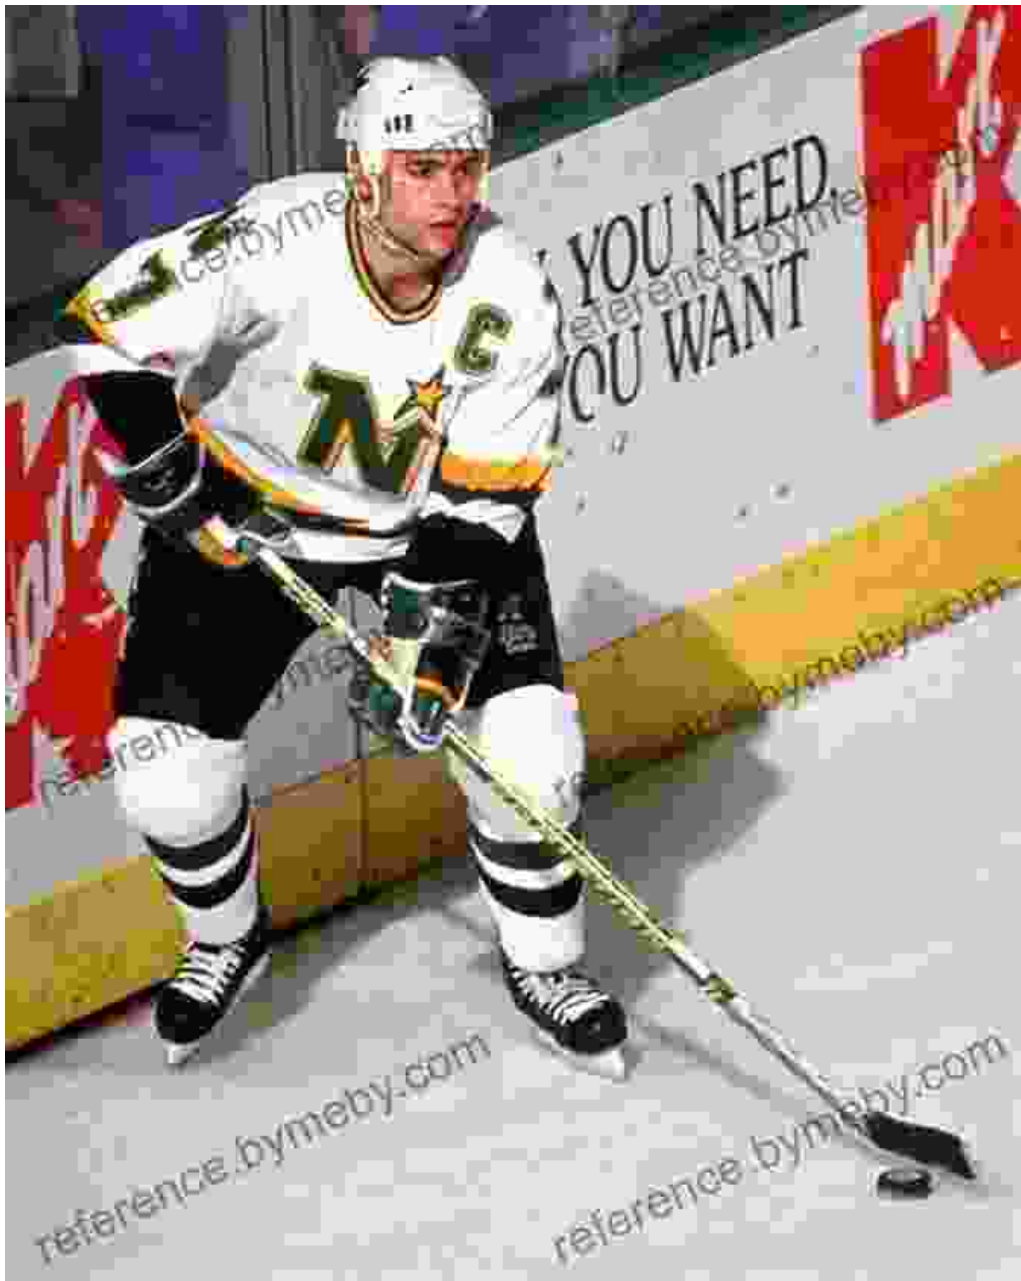

Bobby Hull: The Golden Jet

Neal Broten embodies the spirit of the North Stars. A homegrown talent from Roseau, Minnesota, Broten spent his entire NHL career with the franchise. His dedication, leadership, and unwavering commitment earned him the title of "Mr. North Star."

A City United in Green and Gold

Championships Eluded, But Legacy Endures

Despite their remarkable success and passionate fan base, the North Stars never managed to capture the ultimate prize—the Stanley Cup. However, their impact on the sport of hockey and the city of Minneapolis remains undeniable.

A Hockey Legacy that Lives On
