In this gripping and unflinching memoir, award-winning war correspondent (Elizabeth O'Brien) shares her experiences from the front lines of conflict in the modern age, including her time covering the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

With vivid descriptions and poignant reflections, O'Brien offers a unique perspective on the human cost of war and the indomitable spirit that can emerge from tragedy. She writes about the horrors she witnessed, the challenges of reporting on conflict in a responsible and accurate way, and the impact that her experiences had on her personal life.

In addition to her work as a war correspondent, O'Brien is also a mother and a wife. In her memoir, she writes about the challenges of balancing her career with her family life, and the guilt she felt at leaving her loved ones behind to go to war zones. She also writes about the resilience of her family and the love that sustained her through difficult times.

Modern Day War Correspondent is a powerful and moving memoir that will stay with readers long after they finish reading it. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the human cost of war, the role of journalists in conflict, and the power of redemption.

Here is an excerpt from the book:

"I have seen the best and worst of humanity in war zones. I have seen soldiers risk their lives to save others, and I have seen civilians caught in the crossfire of violence. I have seen children who have lost everything, and I have seen families who have been torn apart by war. But through it all, I have also seen the indomitable spirit of the human heart. I have seen people who have lost everything but their hope, and I have seen people who have found strength in the midst of unimaginable suffering." "

Modern Day War Correspondent is available now from all major booksellers.
