Three Unbreakable Rules:

To ensure a fair and scientific challenge, the authors impose three strict rules on themselves: they must remain within the boundaries of the Chiricahua Mountains, they must walk on foot or horseback, and they must identify each bird by sight or sound without the use of optical aids. These self-imposed constraints add an element of authenticity and adventure to their extraordinary endeavor.

Ten Thousand Birds:

Over the course of a full year, Tim and Brian tirelessly search for and identify an astounding ten thousand birds representing hundreds of species. Their meticulous checklists and detailed observations provide a fascinating glimpse into the diversity and abundance of avian life in the Chiricahua Mountains, a true paradise for birdwatchers.

Lyrical Language and Stunning Photography:

Gallagher's lyrical prose transports readers into the heart of the Chiricahua Mountains, painting vivid portraits of its breathtaking landscapes and the creatures that inhabit them. Stunning photography by renowned nature photographer Brian Peer complements the text, capturing the beauty and wonder of the avian world.

Profound Insights and Connections:

Beyond the breathtaking birding adventures, One Year, Two Men, Three Rules, Ten Thousand Birds offers profound insights into the human relationship with nature. Gallagher and Peer explore the transformative power of observation, the importance of conservation, and the enduring allure of the wilderness.
