In the summer of 2015, Tom Allen embarked on an extraordinary adventure that would change his life forever. At just 20 years old, Tom set out from his home in London on a bicycle, determined to cycle around the world. Over the next two years, Tom traveled through 45 countries, covering over 30,000 miles. He slept in tents, guesthouses, and even the occasional five-star hotel. He ate street food, local delicacies, and whatever else he could find to keep him going. And he met countless people along the way, each with their own unique story to tell.

Tom's journey was not without its challenges. He faced extreme heat, cold, rain, and snow. He had to navigate busy traffic, treacherous mountain passes, and even war zones. But through it all, Tom never gave up. He kept pedaling, one mile at a time, driven by his determination to see the world and make a difference.

Along the way, Tom raised money for charities, spoke to school children about the importance of following your dreams, and inspired countless people to get out of their comfort zones and explore the world. His journey is a testament to the power of human spirit and the importance of never giving up on your dreams.

In his book, The Boy Who Biked the World, Tom shares his incredible story with the world. He writes about the challenges he faced, the people he met, and the life-changing experiences he had. Tom's book is an inspiring read for anyone who has ever dreamed of traveling the world or following their own unique path in life.
