William Shakespeare

The Tragedy of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark || (Act II, Scene ii, 285-300)

I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery of your secret to the King and Queen: moult no feather, I have of late, but wherefore I know not; lost all my mirth; forgone all custome of exercise; and indeed, it goes so heavenly with my disposition; that this goodly frame the Earth, seems to me a sterill Promontory; this most excellent Canopy the Ayre, look you, this braue ore-hanging, this Maiesticall Roofoe, fretted with golden fire: why, it appears no other thing to mee, then a foule and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of worke is a man! how Noble in Reason? how infinite in faculty? in forme and moving how expresse and admirable? In Action, how like an Angel? In apprehension, how like a God? The beauty of the world, the Parragon of Animals; and yet to us what is this Quintessence of Dust? Must delights not mee; no, nor Woman neither, though by your smiling you seeme to say so.
